Dark, perverse, convincing and compassionate Rebekah Lattin-Rawstrones Home is an extremely strong first novel - Toby Litt, author of Hospital Magnetic, claustrophobic and chilling - an exceptional novel that will disturb and provoke me for a long time to come- Joseph DLacey, author of Meat Exquisitely written, Home is a compelling, gut-wrenching, raw novel. I loved this book and I cant stop thinking about the questions the novel asks of us all- Heidi James-Dunbar, author and Lecturer in Creative Writing at Kingston University and author of Carbon A chilling depiction of evil made ordinary. Home is a compelling vision of a world not too distant from our own. The novels rich everyday detail and perfectly realised characters makes the nightmare it depicts even more disturbing. I am reminded of Doris Lessing when I read Rebekahs work - Paul Blaney, author of The anchoress and Handover Home is an unnerving novel that stays with you long after you have finished reading itsometimes one requires something more substantial than the sweet lies of happy-ever-afters - BookEmStevo Rebekah Lattin-Rawstones superbly chilling debut takes a universal subject the fear of being old, abandoned and helpless as the basis of a smart horror that serves both as a stinging indictment on how we treat the elderly in our society as well as a truly gripping story - Byte The Book Steves wife, Fran, is dying. In her wisdom Fran suggests that Steve take a job as caretaker at the local care home, where he can forget his heartache in hard work. Alexa, the hard-edged manager, makes it clear that the caretaker must on no account enter the basement, and at first Steve keeps his head down and quietly goes about his duties. But as Frans condition worsens and his relationship with his only son becomes more distant, Steve begins to uncover dark secrets at his workplace. As Steve grows closer to Milos, the young male nurse, he makes a shocking discovery that he cannot put out of his mind. It inspires him to play detective with disastrous consequences. Home is a dark, suspenseful yet moving story that presents a chilling dystopian vision and poses important questions about how we deal with the aging and the old and what it means to be forgotten. Readers of contemporary horror will find a new and exciting voice in Rebekah Lattin-Rawstrone.
