

Turn Northward, Love

Book 4 in The Wildrose Series Despite her inherited wealth and successful business, Hannah Vaughn considers herself plain and ordinary -- a feeling reinforced by her now deceased father. She is convinced that no man will ever love her for herself, and not just for her money. A thousand miles to the northwest, Dovie Ivey is happily married but has suffered through two traumatic pregnancies, each ending in the death of a desperately wanted infant son. Now more than 40 years old and pregnant for what her husband says is the last time, Dovie is trying her best to trust that God will grant her a healthy child. Farther south, Edward Carroll and his two children, Holly and Neddy, have come to a temporary standstill following the death of Edwards wife and the childrens mother. Her dream was to settle far away in the verdant bush country of Saskatchewan. Now, killed by a rampant influenza, her body lay under a crudely marked grave on the expansive Canadian prairie. Hannah, Dovie, and the Carrolls -- all are at a crossroads that will test their fortitude and faith in God.
